My Day By Eleanor Roosevelt

ON Friday morning, after our arrival, we visited the Malabar Home for the aged. Old couples and single old persons live there. The single persons are four in a room, the couples each have a room of their own in which they are allowed any little personal touches such as pictures, rugs and bed covers. The basic furniture is all provided. Every one who is able gives a few hours a day for the home, and the old people are kept busy with the house and keeping the grounds looking neat and tidy. One old lady was working hard and it was evident that she was enjoying it. They told me there were competitions on the different plots as to who had the best flowers and the prettiest arrangement. For several hours a day, they are allowed to work in a large and pleasant workroom where there is a young director who helps with the design and suggestions for ways in which they can use their knitting or needlework or anything else they know how to do. What they make is sold and they are allowed to keep the money, so they have some pocket money. They have a well-organized program of lectures and entertainment. Among them there are professional who can lecture on different subjects, musicians, and when home talent runs out, there is a movie.

I asked if the different levels of culture represented might not create some difficulty, and was told that the children of the Home were happy and content.

FROM Malabar, we went to the ORT Vocational School near Ramat Gan. This is run in cooperation with the State School system. A great effort is being made to educate the young people for farm life, and many of the courses given tend towards helping them to be useful in a farm community. Most pay their way, in part at least, but there are a good many scholarships for needy children.

OUR next visit was to the Vithin Youth Aliyah Training Center. I had seen this at the very start three years ago, but it has enormously increased in size. Here, there is a village of children in connection with the center, and the children live there all the time, but children come to the center for shorter periods for concentrated training in the various trades. I was watching a young man from Chicago teaching some of the boys to run tractors. They all came from different villages and they go back to run the village tractor.

AT lunch, we were delighted to see our old friends Dr. Siegel and his wife, Dr. Siegel traveling with his wife, Dr. Siegel. He is now in charge of a hospital near Tel Aviv, and it was interesting to hear of his efforts to make the hospital a part of the community.

IN the afternoon, we drove to Jerusalem, arriving at sunset, and the light on the old city was beautiful. I was astonished to see how much tree planting has been done and how the trees grow in this soil that accelerates growth.

Jordan Startled By Egypt's Negev Bid

Jordan yesterday displayed a startled expression at the statement of the Egyptian Propaganda Minister, Major Salah Salem, that Egypt demanded the Negev for the Arabs as the price for an alliance with the West. Amman political circles said that they were "dumbfounded" over the statement, which also made an "offer" of the Gaza Strip to Jordan. Obviously referring to the 200,000 Arab refugees in that area, Defense Minister Awar Nusseibeh stated that the Gaza Strip was a "major responsibility which Egypt apparently wishes to transfer to Jordan's hands."

London Finds Salem's Statement Puzzling

LONDON, Monday (Reuters).—Arab control of the Negev now appeared to be Egypt's minimum price for military cooperation with the West, diplomats here today, commenting on yesterday's statement by Major Salah Salem, Egypt's Minister of Propaganda. Salem's statement puzzled diplomatic quarters here. He appeared to be demanding that Israel surrender the Negev and an Arab-Israeli peace settlement, but there was no information available here today to give substance to the suggestion, and it seemed to be a "ridiculous and childish" demand.

A common Egyptian-Jordanian border would unite the Arab states from southern Turkey down to Iraq, a grouping which the Western powers would like to see incorporated in a Middle East defense organization. Salem's statement might therefore have been intended to show the Western powers that in attacking Israel's pact with Turkey he was not seeking cooperation with them. Diplomatic sources in London said that Major Salem would find no support for the transfer of the Negev to Egypt as a step towards winning Egypt's military association with the West.

More Money for More, Better Schools Asked by MK's

Jerusalem Post Knesset Reporter. An appeal for more money for various essential branches of education was made yesterday by Mrs. Shoshanna Peretz, General Zionist Chairman of the Education Committee, who said that there was need for an extra IL250,000 for Teachers' Seminars, IL400,000 for school equipment, and IL200,000 as grants to parents of five-year-olds who could not pay kindergarten fees and whose children were at a disadvantage in the first school year if they reached it unprepared and often ignorant of Hebrew.

Report on Scopus Sent to Burns

The Acting Chief of the U.N. Truce Supervision Organization, Colonel C. Hommel, has sent a detailed report to General Burns on his negotiations with the Israeli authorities on the Scopus matter. Mr. Albert Grand, U.N. Press Officer, told his weekly press conference in the Old City yesterday afternoon. Mr. Grand revealed that before leaving for New York, General Burns had left strict instructions with Colonel Hommel, stating that the U.N. Scopus convey until Israel has agreed to remove the road blocks. (ANA)

MAC Censures Jordan For Kibbutz Murder

The Israel-Jordan Mixed Armistice Commission yesterday censured the Jordanian Government for the murder of a watchman and the wounding of his companion at Kibbutz Yisraeli by an "irregular Jordanian force" on Friday night, the commission said. The M.A.C., which met in emergency session under Colonel Charles B. Brewer, also found that the Jordanians had stolen the rifles of the two Israelis. The Chairman of the Israel-Jordan Mixed Armistice Commission, in explaining his abstention on Sunday on Israel's resolution condemning Egypt for an attack on the Sharmat settlement last week, stated that there was "no convincing evidence that the authors of the incident came from Egyptian-controlled territory."

Egypt, Iraq Ties Better

CAIRO, Monday (Reuters).—The Iraqi Ambassador, Nabil el-Khatib, called on Egyptian President Nasser today, and reported after the meeting that relations between the two countries are becoming increasingly better. He stated that he did not wish to indicate that the incident had not occurred, since the damage caused by it was being repaired by a U.N. Observer, nor did he want to imply that it was committed by Israelis.

No Time for Mock Democracy—Nasser

CAIRO, Monday (Reuters).—Premier Gamal Abdel Nasser said today that he had no time for mock democracy. He told a party of visiting Indian journalists, "We are going to have no parliament in Egypt until we have liquidated the influence of the feudal landlords and capitalists and have built a country which is able to lead the Egyptian people to a clean democracy."

Egyptian Infiltrators Chased from Fields

A group of 10 Egyptian infiltrators penetrated into Israel territory, north of Nahal Oz, yesterday morning, evidently for the purpose of reaping in the settlement fields. The Army spokesman said that the infiltrators were chased from the fields and the settlement fields. The infiltrators fled back to Egyptian territory. Israel has submitted a complaint to the Israel-Egypt Mixed Armistice Commission.

Retrial Ordered of 60 Rumanian Zionists

The Rumanian Supreme Court has reversed the judgments against some 60 active Zionists, who were sentenced by military courts to prison terms ranging from four to 20 years for "passing information to the Israeli Legation, secret meetings, distribution of money received from the Legation and treason." The court ordered a retrial of the 60 Zionists. The court said that the military courts had not followed the proper legal procedure.

Minority Parties Protest Histadrut Poll Changes

TEL AVIV, Monday. — A walk-out in protest against the Histadrut election committee was staged today by representatives of the minority parties before the vote on a Mapai proposal to change the Histadrut laws. The Histadrut members were followed by the Communists who had tabled a separate complaint against the election committee. The suggested changes were approved by 23 votes. The minority parties have about 20 representatives on this committee.

Serlin Stresses Preventive Medicine

By ARYAN RUBINSTEIN

Mr. Joseph Serlin yesterday diagnosed the nation's health and found that while the patient was not seriously ill, there were a number of symptoms that called for immediate treatment. The Minister of Health, speaking before the Knesset on the budget debate, made out two prescriptions:

- 1) Pay more attention to preventive medicine; and
- 2) Coordinate health services.

Mr. Serlin also sharply criticized the Ministry for Religious Affairs for carrying out an "organized campaign" against the Anatomy and Pathology Law. Referring to the long-standing differences between the Ministry of Health and Kupat Holim, Mr. Serlin noted that the Ministry had been charged with attempting to destroy public health services. In fact, however, the Ministry was the only body in the country engaged in public health activities, for that designation could hardly be given to medical aid provided by a public institution rather than by a private physician.

Only the State could guarantee equal medical care, independent of social factors. Kupat Holim leaders had publicly declared that the Ministry of Health should limit itself to regulatory functions, but the Ministry was resolved to carry out its productive function that, "parallel services are set up, duplication is created, and money which we do not have is wasted."

The coordinated efforts of the five bodies concerned with tuberculosis had produced signal results. The Minister had followed that with the appointment of a council for the coordination of health services. He hoped that the results would not be disappointing, "although the possibilities of voluntary cooperation are limited."

School for Nurses
The draft budget included 11.4M for preventive medicine which was to be largely for sanitation, epidemiology, mother and child care, and increased activity against tuberculosis. To reduce the shortage of trained personnel in the field of preventive medicine, a school for public health nurses would be opened in the next 12 months.

Even though not enough attention was paid to preventive medicine in this country, considerable progress had been made: infant mortality had decreased from 100 in 1947 to 58.7 in 1952 to 34.5 in 1954; and among Arabs from 67.7 to 59.7. The rate of diphtheria cases had decreased from 10 to six per 10,000 population, and the tuberculosis mortality rate had been brought down to 10.4 per 10,000 — one of the best records in the world.

Two weak points on the health front were poor sanitary conditions and the care of the mentally ill. Serlin stated in the field of sanitation, Israel was below the level of a number of Mediterranean nations. The Ministry's Sanitation Department was doing much in the way of guiding local authorities in planning sewage disposal, but the problem was mainly a financial one. The shortage of funds for the diversion of the waters of the Yarkon to the Negev without simultaneously guaranteeing a solution to the sewage problem.

While Israelis were generally aware of their personal cleanliness and that of their homes, they were often very apathetic to sanitary conditions in their neighborhoods. It was the task of the schools to bring about a change in this attitude.

Qualified Personnel Needed
On the care of the mentally ill, the Minister asserted that the problem was not simply one of increasing the number of beds but of finding qualified medical and semi-medical personnel. Since 1952, 270 beds for the mentally ill had been added, bringing the total to 2,150, but even this would not fill the need.

Turning to the question of anatomy, Mr. Serlin said that following legislation, he had set up a commission of inquiry which had investigated all the pathology institutions in the country. The minutes had found that all autopsies were being performed in accordance with the law and that the commission of anatomy had decreased since the law was passed.

Mr. Serlin returned on what apparently Dr. E. Wertheim, Deputy Minister for Religious Affairs, requested him to be responsible for the execution of the Anatomy and Pathology Law.

A KUPAT Holim clinic was opened at Kfar Tzuba in the "Kfar Tzuba" yesterday. Mr. M. Namir, Secretary-General of the Histadrut, Mr. R. Barakat, head of its Arab Department, and Mr. J. Becker, head of the Trade Union Department, were present at the ceremony.

WHAT DID YOU SAY, DEAR?

NANTER, France, Monday (Reuters). — A married couple, 35-year-old Eugene Guillot and his wife, blew the roof off their house here yesterday.

Police reported that Miss Guillot pulled the pipe of a cylinder of gas for the kitchen stove when her husband threatened her with a gun.

A fire in the room exploded the escaping gas, brought ceilings down, wrecked furniture and blew the roof off. Guillot was taken to hospital and his wife was slightly injured in the face. Their next-door neighbours were dug out unharmed from a pile of plaster.

Cobbler Gets Life For Murder of Wife

Jerusalem Post Reporter

HAIFA, Monday. — The District Court here today passed its second life sentence of the week, this time on Dov Ariel, 50-year-old Haifa cobbler, for the murder of his wife, Chai, on May 9 last year.

Relations between the couple had been strained and she had pressed him for a divorce so as to be free to marry a more intelligent man. He stabbed her during a quarrel, then threw himself from a third floor window, was critically injured, but recovered in hospital.

The Court held that premeditation had been proved by a note Ariel left on the day of the murder asking to be buried alongside his wife; by the fact that the knife with which the murder had been committed had been sharpened and by the large number of stab wounds on various parts of the body.

MOTHER GUILTY BUT INSANE

HAIFA, Monday. — Tamar Milgrom was today found guilty by the District Court of having strangled her six-year-old son, Dov, last April, with his pyjama cord, but was declared to be of unsound mind and ordered to be detained at the pleasure of the Minister of Justice.

Her defence counsel, Mr. M. Ben-Israel, said that Milgrom had been unable to understand what she was doing and could not therefore be punished. The woman pleaded guilty but maintained that she had not been sane when she had done it. During the hearing, the Court heard in camera testimony by the Director of the Acre Government Mental Home.

IN THE SPRING, A YOUNG WOLF'S FANCY...

Jerusalem Post Staff

It was officially the first day of spring yesterday, and the eight-month-old wolf cub of the Hebrew University's Pedagogical Institute must have felt it was about time to come out into the open.

At the first sign of dawn, he came out of the institute and began a day of sightseeing in the southern part of the city. He watched children skipping on their way to school, and when classes began, he continued on his merry way to the Tel Aviv quarter.

By this time, 30 policemen were after him, but being a clever

ARMY JUDGE BROUGHT HOME FOR BURIAL

LYDDA AIRPORT. — The coffin of Sgan-Aluf M. Spector, a veteran member of Hashomer and the Hagana, who died last week in the U.S., arrived here this morning in an El Al plane, accompanied by the wife of the deceased and his younger son.

The coffin will be brought to the former Histadrut building in Allenby Road, where mourners will pay their last respects between 3 and 10 tomorrow morning. The funeral will take place in Kfar Giliad.

From 1948, Sgan-Aluf Spector was a member in the Defence Forces traffic court.

Mrs. FDR Visits Tiberias Area

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TIBERIAS, Monday. — Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt continued her tour of Galilee today and stopped at the Town Hall here and at the mothers. She also saw one of the housing projects being built for the native residents.

At the local art gallery, Mayor M. Sabar presented her with a large canvas, "Kinneret Fishermen" by Hanna Lerner, as a gift from the Municipality. The gallery management gave her a water colour by Milla Lerner.

Mrs. Roosevelt and her companions also made several purchases. The party drove to Capernaum and was shown over the ancient synagogue. Afterwards she saw the Hula drainage works. In the afternoon, she left for Nazareth, where she had a short meeting with the Mayor and the Military Governor.

Tomorrow's subscription concert of the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra in Tel Aviv will be specially dedicated to Mrs. Roosevelt as a mark of appreciation for the work she has done on behalf of Israel, and in recognition of her interest in the I.P.O.

BIBLICAL SOCIETY

The Third Annual Convention of the Israel Society for Biblical Research will be held on March 23-24 at the Law Faculty of the Hebrew University in Jerusalem, and not March 23-24, as stated yesterday.
